French Conversation

Friday 27 November, MVH Lounge 10.00-11.30

Come and join in for a relaxed, sociable journey into the French language and the passionate development of French Cuisine.

We'll begin with about 30 minutes of practical French, using short video clips of French speakers chatting about everyday topics. These lively, authentic conversations will help us hear French as it is really spoken and pick up useful vocabulary, grammar and pronunciation in context.

We'll then try out what we have learned through easy going conversation on similar everyday themes, helping us build confidence and get our French flowing.

For the rest of the session, we'll discover how France became a world leader in gastronomy through a presentation entitled

The Evolution of French Cuisine - From Regional Cooking to Contemporary Gastronomy.

French cuisine is widely regarded as one of the world's most influential culinary traditions. We will see how it evolved over centuries from simple regional and country cooking into the elaborate traditions of haute cuisine, before being transformed by nouvelle cuisine and, more recently, contemporary gastronomy.

Along the way, we will see how each stage reflects changes in French society, economics, technology and ideas about what food should be.

Do come along for a warm, relaxed session as we explore the history of French cuisine, observe its composition of ingredients to dish, share your experiences of French food and practise your French.

Personal note

In November, it will be more than seven years since I took on the challenge of Group Leader, French Conversation. It has been a real pleasure, and I would like to thank everyone who has contributed presentations, offered support, and helped make the group so enjoyable over the years.

Next year, I will be 80, and with diminishing levels of energy I have decided to step down at the end of November 2026. I am happy to announce that Ian Butterfield will step forward with new ideas and take on the challenge of Group Leader. I will help her take on her new role, and I wish her well for the future.

The Human Body - The Immune system

Stephen Doyle - Wednesday November 25th, 12.00 / 1.00 in the Annex.

Cost: £2 (No need to book - just turn up)

This session explores the remarkably sophisticated defence network that keeps us healthy every day: the human immune system. We will look past the technical jargon to uncover how white blood cells act as sentinels, how our bodies learn to recognise and remember past invaders, and why this complex system sometimes gets confused, causing autoimmune diseases. I hope we can demystify the biological forces working behind the scenes to protect us.
